Champion Health and Fitness in Rockford hosted the Midwest Indoor Wheelchair Championships this past weekend.

On this page, I have a story of Scott Bonk, who competed for the first time and had a great weekend.

Bonk wasn't the only area athlete who had a solid weekend of play.

Comstock Park's Shaun Walters also competed, and won one championship and made the semifinals of another flight.

Walters teamed up with Ancaster, Ontario's, Adrian Dieleman to win the title at C doubles flight. They beat a pair who came to Rockford from Mongolia, 3-6, 6-0, 7-6.

In singles play, Walters advanced to semifinals of the C singles flight. There he lost to Belmont's Patrick Besta, 6-4, 1-6, 4-6.

Mulder falls in quarters

It looks like Kenowa Hills graduate Ryan Mulder is doing well in his sport of choice after high school.

Mulder is a professional mountain bike racer and Saturday competed in the Jeep King of the Mountain Professional Mountain Bike World Championships at Pando Ski Area.

He lost in the quarterfinals to Wade Bootes of Australia, but it was an impressive ride for the former Mulder.

And by the way, the loss to Bootes was nothing to be ashamed of. He went on to win the title.

Rain cancels racing

I know we needed the rain. But it sure came last week.

Events at Berlin Raceway were rained out last weekend and the drivers will try and get back at it this Saturday.

Points leaders in each division up to this point of the season are Terry Bockheim in the Sportsman, Casey Berenbrock in the Pro Stock, Brian Wiersma in the Pro Super Stock and Tim DeVos in the Late Model.
