Rockford - West Michigan will play host to some of the Midwest's best tennis players this weekend, but how these players move court sets them apart.

Disabled athletes from 15 states and three countries will take part in the 2005 Midwest Indoor Wheelchair Tennis Tournament

Competition began this morning.

Tennis is not the only game many of the athletes play.

"With basketball, you have to play in a wheelchair with other people in wheelchairs, but tennis is really cool because I play with and he's an able body, and it's really fun," said Jenison tennis player Jessica Sport.

The tournament wraps up Sunday at Champion Health and Fitness in Rockford.

There's $9,000 in prize money for the top athletes.
